QUEEN ALEXANDRA OF GREAT BRITAIN DIES

MOTHER OF GEORGE V SUCCUMBS TO HEART ATTACK ON SATURDAY

Dowager Was Beloved By Empire—Royal Family
at Bedside

London, Eng., Nov. 20.—Queen Mother Alexandra of England, beloved of the entire empire, died today at her Sandringham estate in Norfolk, following severe heart attacks yesterday and today.

Death occurred at 5:25 p. m. The widow of King Edward VII and mother of the present King George V had been in failing health for some time but the suddenness of her passing after a critical illness lasting only since Thursday shocked and grieved England which had loved and almost worshipped the "Sea King's Daughter from overseas," ever since in 1863 when she first stepped foot on English soil, coming from her Danish homeland.

The Queen, who lacked less than a dozen days of reaching 81 years, had been in failing health some time but the sudden heart attacks yesterday and today stirred the nation and turned the land into deep mourning.

King George and Queen Mary, staying at Sandringham for some days, were first to go to the bedside of Queen Alexandra, but the royal addition of Princess Royal and Queen Maud of Norway, her daughter, The Duke of York proceeded from London and the Prince of Wales, in a special train, went to Sandringham after the Guild Hall banquet, at which London was to give him an official welcome from his trip to South America, had been cancelled.

The news spread throughout England and caused deep sorrow around the town house Marlborough, and sympathetic throngs soon became so dense that special police were called out.

A homely wife who would be the mother of a flock of children, even ten, is the main desire in life of Rudolph Valentino, of screen fame, according to his own words as he departed for Europe there, gossip says, to hasten a divorce for Mrs. Valentino.

APPRAISED VALUE OF GAS COMPANY IS PROBED BY CITIES

Expert Witnesses Are Heard In Move To Halt
New Rate

Columbus, O., Nov. 20.—Attorneys representing the seventy-two cities protesting against the two new rate schedules of the Logan Gas Company delved further today into the appraisal valuation of the company, which they charged, "was established for rate making purposes."

As the hearing on the company's first rate schedule was resumed before the public utilities commission, City Attorney Mouser of Marion brought to light an alleged discrepancy of nearly $2,000,000 in the company's books.

"The account books of the company provide for a charge of $422,000 for amortization while a separate charge of $2,347,000 has been entered for the same purpose," Mouser declared.

E. G. Hill, Newark, N. J., an expert witness who appeared for the company's valuation at $52,401,747. Later, under cross-examination by Mouser, Hill testified that the valuation was fixed at $20,000,000 in 1922 when the company issued additional stock.

The evidence introduced was intended to support the rate increase asked by the Gas Company last February 7. The increase, now being collected under bond, has not been approved or rejected by the public utilities commission, although the company has filed notice of a second increase, effective in 120 days.

DAMAGES CLAIMED FOR KILLING CHINESE

Pekin, Nov. 20.—Following a claim against the American Steamer Melren alleging that she sank Chinese junks and drowned some Chinese, the foreign office today presented another claim against the United States navy guard killed two Chinese and wounded nine others.

Sinking of junks is not entirely an uncommon occurrence in Chinese waters. Mariners proceed on the theory that the junks must get out of their way or else take the consequences, for they know of the Chinese superstition that it is "good luck" for a big steamer to cut across the stern of a junk—and miss it.

The Chinese believe that the cutting across process drives away the "devils" with which Chinese life is supposed to be beset.

COOLIDGE ASKS FOR CO-OPERATION FROM BUSINESS IN TALK

President Is Given Warm Reception In New York Speech

New York, Nov. 20.—President Coolidge's plea for co-operation between legitimate business and government, each "sovereign in its own sphere" brought him the most enthusiastic reception, New York has accorded him. Speaking last night before more than one thousand business leaders at the dinner of the New York Chamber of Commerce at the Waldorf Astoria, the president said that American finance since the war has marked a new epoch in international relations. He added that this country could perform no greater service to concord and peace than by entering the world court.

Mr. Coolidge's assertion that "true business" need have no fear of his administration and his references to the part American business had played in the post war reconstruction elicited bursts of applause.

The president warned his hearers that the "privilege-seeking" type of business need expect no mercy at his hands.

"Those who are engaged in true business," he said, "instead of regarding the government as their opponent and enemy ought to regard it as their vigilant supporter and friend."

The president outlined his opposition to over-regulation of industry and said that the future of the United States demands economical development by elimination of waste in materials and men and the realization that business had purged itself of "trusts."

Even over-shadowing internal progress, Mr. Coolidge said toward the close of his address, is progress of internationalism.

Urging America's entrance into the world court, in a call stronger than any he previously has uttered, the president said:

"With our enormous and constantly increasing interests abroad, there are constantly accumulating reasons why we should signify our adherence to the permanent court of international justice."

"Mindful of our determination to avoid all interference in the political affairs, which do not concern us, of other nations, I can think of no more reassuring action than the declaration of America that it will wholeheartedly join with others in support of the tribunal for the administration of international justice which they have created."

"It would be the beginning of a new world spirit."

FIEND WHO ATTACKS WOMEN IS SOUGHT

Toledo, O., Nov. 20.—A club-wielder who has attacked six women, killing two of them, in Toledo, within as many weeks, eluded police today.

Mrs. Bachelor was in a serious condition today. Police can advance no motives for the attacks. One of the victims, Mrs. Emma Hatfield, 48, died, and the mutilated body of Mrs. Lydia Baumgartner, believed to have been assaulted by the man, was found between two houses here.

The man attacked Mrs. Bachelor under the glare of a porch light. When she pleaded with him, he grinned and brought a club down on her head, she said. Her screams attracted neighbors who found her unconscious.

RHINELANDER CASE ADJOURNED UNTIL MONDAY BY COURT

Mysterious Letters Hang Over Head of Young
Aristocrat

White Plains, L. I., Nov. 20.—The marriage annulment case of Leonard Kip Rhinelander against his colored wife, Alice, was abruptly adjourned until Monday, today by supreme court justice Joseph Morschauer.

The court's action followed a conference in chambers in which Morschauer consulted with former justice Isaac N. Mills, counsel for young Rhinelander and Lee Parsons Davis, attorney for the boy's wife.

What went on behind the closed doors was not revealed but the belief is growing that rather than continue the introduction of more of the boy's love letters, some agreement will be reached for termination of the trial.

Two mysterious letters written Alice by the wealthy scion of one of Westchester's premier Huguenot families appear to be the cause for halting the proceedings. They have been waved over the head of the plaintiff like a brace of menacing bludgeons in the hands of Attorney Davis, ever since the trial started.

Yesterday Davis permitted Rhinelander to read one of them. His hands trembled as he perused the missive and admitted authorship.

Young Rhinelander was on hand, nattily dressed and apparently ready to continue his ordeal on the stand which already had endured for a week.

The venerable ex-justice explained that he had received certain information yesterday afternoon which caused Davis to concur in the motion to adjourn.

MAIL PLANE FALLS BUT PILOT UNHURT

Kennerdell, Pa., Nov. 20.—The west bound airmail plane crashed to earth here today and was smashed to bits. Seve Kauffman, Cleveland, pilot of the plane crawled from the tangled pile of wreckage unhurt. He immediately reported to Cleveland that he was unhurt and the mail was safe. A relief plane was dispatched from Cleveland to speed the New York mail on to its destination, Chicago.

Kauffman is en route to Cleveland by rail.

The crash occurred in the airmail graveyard, 15 miles from the spot where Charles Ames, another Cleveland pilot was killed last month and where two other pilots met death within the past two years.

Kauffman's plane crashed into tree tops at 1 a. m. He had been flying low under heavy clouds in order to keep location lights in sight.

EXPECT AGREEMENT IN MITCHELL TRIAL

Washington, Nov. 20.—The cloud that hovered over the Mitchell court martial and threatened to postpone a final verdict for some weeks was dissipated today.

When the court martial resumed, Col. Herbert A. White, Mitchell's military counsel, announced that an agreement on testimony of four Hawaiian witnesses, was in sight. The defense and prosecution disagreed last night over stipulations and a two week's adjournment was threatened.

"We have not yet reached a decision," White explained, "but it is certain that we will very shortly."

The agreement means that the trial will probably be concluded next week.

COL. COOLIDGE IS STILL IMPROVING

LOCATING STEAMER INDICATES TRAGEDY

Radio Message Brings Brief Word Of Vessel's Fate—Ship Carried 300 Laborers When In
In Distress

Washington, Nov. 20.—News of what may prove to be another tragedy or another romantic rescue at sea, was received by the Navy radio, here today.

A message from the steamer Brazos said that it had located the Haitian steamer Ville Des Cayes, said to have been carrying 300 laborers from Santiago De Cuba to island sugar fields and has been reported as missing.

Last advices were that three members of the crew picked up by a British tramp steamer Tuesday and at that time it was reported that the vessel had been sunk in a hurricane.

There was nothing in today's message to indicate the fate of these aboard, whether they had been rescued, or whether any were lost with the ship.

Absence of information on the subject led navy officers to believe passengers and crew were safe.

The message said the Brazos found the ship 18 miles from Pilon Harbor.

SHENANDOAH COURT EXONERATES JUDGE OF INSINUATIONS

Rules Dealings With Mrs.
Lansdowne Conformed
With Law

Washington, Nov. 20.—The charges of Mrs. Margaret Ross Lansdowne, navy widow, that an effort had been made to twist her testimony were quashed today by the Shenandoah court of inquiry. The court found its former judge advocate, Captain Paul Foley, not guilty of her accusations.

The court held that Foley was not guilty of any of the insinuations or charges and that he had dealt with Mrs. Lansdowne in conformity with obligations imposed upon him by law, as judge advocate of the court.

The verdict amounted to complete exoneration.

No improper conduct could be alleged against Foley from the evidence produced in this phase of the case before the court, the decision read by Admiral Hilary P. Jones, president of the Board, asserted.

The decision was read at the opening of court today after a brief executive session when points of law were argued and the decision was finally drawn.

It had the unanimous approval of the four members of the court.

Although completely exonerated, Foley will not resume his former position as judge advocate. Major Henry Leonard, U. S. M. C., retired, who has acted since Foley's resignation, will continue.

The text of the decision follows: "It appears to the court after a careful consideration of all of the evidence adduced and of record in the court that the defendant, Captain Paul Foley, U. S. N., late judge advocate of this court is not guilty of seeking and endeavoring to cause false testimony to be offered before this court and is not guilty of seeking and endeavoring by improper means and endeavoring the witness about to influence the witness about to testify before this court and it further being a matter of judicial notice of this court that it was an obligation upon said Captain Paul Foley, as judge advocate of the court to make a preliminary examination of witnesses to be examined before this court and it further appearing to the court upon consideration of aforesaid that the said Captain Foley has in no wise been guilty of improper or unethical conduct, and all the evidence known to this court having been adduced before it, it is hereby judged and ordered that the said Captain Foley, U. ### RIGHTS TO DRIVE AUTO SUSPENDED

Frank Archie, Jamestown, must not drive an automobile for one year.

This penalty was imposed Thursday by S. C. Wright, probate judge, when he paroled Archie from the County Jail where he was serving a ninety-day sentence for operating an automobile while intoxicated.

The decision suspending driving rights is expected to preface sentences of similar nature, in penalty for reckless operation of automobiles when the cases come before Judge Wright. The jurist said Friday he believes public sentiment demands drastic action to curb reckless driving because it endangers human life. Practice of suspending driving rights has been used successfully in other cities. This was the first time such an order was imposed here.

Archie had served twelve days of his sentence when the parole was granted. He was convicted November 7 and fined $25 and costs in addition to the jail term. Fines and costs were paid. The parole agreement also included the clause that Archie abstain from use of intoxicating liquor.

BUSINESS CLUB PRESIDENT GIVES ADVICE IN CLUB TALK

Sound advice to business women was heard by members of Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club, and their guests, Dayton and Columbus members, when Miss Jean Cavers, Columbus, president of the Ohio Federation, gave a talk at the monthly meeting of the local club at the Knights of Pythias hall, Thursday evening.

Miss Cavers urged business women to consider their business merits. "People are apt to think of what they do wrong instead of what they do right," she said.

"You know your own good and bad traits and you should make a questionnaire for yourself listing the things for and against you. The questions should include: 'Do you consider your business associates as you do the members of your family?' 'Is your personal appearance as it should be?' 'Have you annoying habits, such as over-use of perfume and cosmetics?' 'Do you watch the clock?'

"You should consider your work as your own personal business and take an interest in it. Encourage your fellow-workers to do their best. Have a friendly attitude toward everyone.

"The questionnaire is good as a self-examination and a help on future acts and thoughts. The Business and Professional Women's Club began of 'Better business women for a better business world,' refers to women that are superior mentally, physically, morally and spiritually.

"Business is but a glorious game," Miss Cavers said. "Don't be in business just to earn your bread and butter," she warned. "You must be interested in your work."

"One of the surest ways to get a 'raise' in salary is by not watching the clock and being willing to work overtime.

Miss Cavers talk followed the regular dinner gathering. About forty Dayton club members and several Dayton girls were entertained. Xenia and Dayton girls were grouped by numbered cards. Tables in the banquet hall were beautifully appointed with Thanksgiving tokens, yellow candles in crystal holders and bouquets of chrysanthemums. A sufficient amount of money was made from the three-day exhibition to purchase a number of paintings from the old masters reproduced from originals for the class rooms at Central High, it is announced.

The collection on display included reproductions of carbon color paintings, large carbon photographs, photographs, engravings and copper plate.

NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR PARTIES, SAID

H. C. Pendry, city school superintendent, announced Friday that school authorities and the board of education want it made plain that they are not responsible for social events attended by high school students, outside of school jurisdiction.

"We understand that certain affairs have been held, under the name of high school parties" such as football parties and other affairs," of which we have no knowledge," Mr. Pendry said Friday.

School authorities have no power of regulation over affairs held outside of the school, he said, and such affairs are generally held as money-making schemes.

The only way to settle this contest, and let Mitzi have some spare time to devote to her friends is to enter it, thinks he Goofer. He isn't conceded or anything. But he is in earnest. He is going about it methodically, scientifically, consulting authorities on the subject: Who could do better than Mr. Vester? Then there is the Bible that has great many names nobody seems to be using. The doll hasn't much confidence in the Goofer, you can tell by her expression. We haven't either, not on names.

Adelaide and Polly are not showing each other their lists—but they are reading off to each other all the names that they know won't do. (Adelaide is wearing a two piece rep dress trimmed with buttons made of the material and Polly has a velvet skirt and a silk blouse of a jolly green.) Aunt Sophia has joined them to suggest a few names she thought might help. Everybody is entering this contest, everybody! If you haven't already, you'd better begin now for the contest closes December first. Write Mitzi and maybe you will get the $50 prize for the best name. Send your suggestions to Modish Mitzi in care of this newspaper.

FACTORS IN BUSINESS SUCCESS.

IN MAKING a report of intelligence tests applied to a group of successful business men, Dr. W. V. Bingham, authority on personnel research, observes:

"University teachers are prone to magnify the importance of intelligence. It is indeed likely to be the chief factor in their own success. They tend to estimate the effectiveness of their colleagues in terms of intellectual accomplishment. They rank their students in the order of their ability to master and manipulate ideas. But in the world of business success is first of all a matter of getting things done. Ability to persuade and control people is an outstanding asset. Effectiveness within an organization demands such traits as dependability, co-operativeness, energy, promptness of decision. If traits like these are present to a high degree, a man may make a notable business success even though his rating for mental alertness is comparatively low. Intelligence there must be, above a certain minimum. But this minimum is, perhaps, not so high as is often supposed."

THE FIRST NATIONAL THANKSGIVING.

THE genius of George Washington had much to do with shaping this country in a permanently successful form. It would be well therefore, when we approach a national holiday like Thanksgiving, to think what he felt this occasion should mean to the people of this country. He made these points in his proclamation as president of a Thanksgiving day:

1.—That we should all render thanks to God for his care and protection. Considering the perils from which our country has been saved, the same obligation is still more insistent now.

2.—That we should be grateful for tranquility, union, and plenty. No nation on earth has had so much of these blessings as we have.

3.—That we should be grateful for the American constitution. Considering that this constitution made this government a success where all previous democratic institutions have failed, we have great reason for gratitude on this point.

Thankfulness for civil and religious liberty. There is no country in the world that has so much liberty as we have, except in those countries where there is liberty because there is no strong or well organized government. We do not care for liberty to that extent.

Washington was not satisfied merely with any general feeling of gratitude as a holiday observance. He also called on the people to pray to God for the pardon of their transgressions, for help in performing their duties, for the continuance of the government through "wise, just, and constitutional laws," for knowledge, religion and virtue, and the progress of science, and such a degree of temporal prosperity as God may think best. These are noble ideals and we could well think these thoughts here in Middletown on our Thanksgiving.

MARRIED WAGE EARNERS.

THE women of the future, so far as physically able, will be helping their husbands support their families, according to the prediction of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, made in a recent address at Milwaukee. She felt that standards of expense and the level of prices will continue to rise, making it necessary for the women to take hold and help their husband.

The woman of 20 years ago would have groaned at such a prospect. Not merely were most of them unable to do anything to help support their families, but a very great number required help to do their own housework.

Probably the house work of the ordinary home is not more than half what it was 25 years ago, owing to new inventions and customs. The modern woman is full of energy, and if she can get more of the benefits of the world by taking on some activities outside the home, she will not hesitate to do so.

MAN: BUILDER.

MAN is the builder of his own fortune. The mark he sets is the plan by which he will work and the blocks with which he will build are the hours of today. An hour mispent today is a block mislaid which must be torn out tomorrow and replaced. On the other hand, an hour improved today is the block laid true and true that may be forgotten but that will stand the ravages of the storm and leave the tomorrow for other blocks.

The time allotted to man in which to complete his building is short; old age the taskmaster swooping down upon the worker toiling with mislaid blocks. Men who misuse their hours of youth will spend old age tearing down and rebuilding in feverish but futile haste to spread a protecting roof over their declining years. Not so with the man who makes every hour count in his building plan. His walls shall defy the chill blasts of old age.

NS SCOUT REPORT XENIA IN K. I. O. LOOP

Local baseball men are disposed to question reports issued from Cincinnati that Xenia will be represented by a team in the K. I. O. baseball Association next season. The report said Xenia, Dayton and Cincinnati baseball teams would be added to the association next year in line with expansion plans of the organization. W. H. Minor is backing the Xenia team, the report said.

It is also reported that Washington Park has been leased by Minor for next year and that the Xenia nine will play its association games on this diamond.

Jesse Adams, a Xenia baseball man, announced Thursday, he had leased the park for five years and denied reports Minor holds the lease.

DREAMING

1905-Twenty Years Ago-1925

L. M. Dull, well-known traveling salesman, met with a painful mishap which will disable him for some time. He cut his right eye on a clothes line. John Gardner, of Spring Hill, sprained his ankle attending "gym" at the Y. M. C. A. and must hop about with the aid of a couple of canes for a time. W. H. Loucks, national organizer of the Good Roads Association, will be here Thursday for the purpose of organizing a branch of the association in Xenia.

Practically all of the ministers and about a score of the elders of the United Presbyterian churches of the Xenia Presbytery were in Springfield yesterday at the annual meeting.

Apple Butter: Wash apples and cut them in fairly small pieces, not removing skins or cores. Place them in the preserving kettle and barely cover them with cold, sweet cider. Bring to the boil and let continue to simmer till the apples are tender, then rub through a coarse sieve to eliminate seeds and cores. Measure the pulp and to each quart add one pint of brown sugar (or granulated sugar may be used if desired), one tablespoon of ground cinnamon and one teaspoon of ground cloves. Return the mixture to the preserving kettle and simmer till thick. Store in sterilized jars or eat at once.

Cheese-Ball Salad: To one-half cup of either cottage cheese or cream cheese, add one tablespoon of soft butter, one tablespoon of minced raw onion and one teaspoon of chopped red pepper. Cream the mixture well and then form it into small balls. Serve these on lettuce leaves which have been drenched with French dressing. (For "Bride.")

Grape Jelly: Place stemmed grapes in your preserving kettle with no water (the grapes themselves contain enough juice to make the addition of water unnecessary). Heat and crush, and when the juice is running freely turn them into your jelly bag. Let drip overnight. In the morning measure this juice. For each pint of it set aside two cups of granulated sugar. Warm the sugar on a plate in your oven. Let the grape juice boil gently for 20 minutes before adding the warm sugar to it. Boil briskly until the sugar is dissolved and after that more slowly till two drops will form at once on the edge of a spoon (when a little of the juice is shaken up from the kettle and dripped back into it). This is one of the "jelly tests." Generally it requires but a few minutes for this two-drop stage to be reached. Turn the mixture into hot jelly glasses which you have sterilized by boiling, empty, for 15 minutes in clear water to cover. If you pour boiling jelly into cold glasses the glasses will break. So keep them hot by wrapping in towels wrung from hot water. Also set them out of a draught at this stage. When the jelly is cold and solid, pour melted paraffine wax over the top, place on tin covers, and store. Many women write me that their jellies do not "jell." This may be because they were not boiled long enough or because the fruits had not enough "pectin" in them. When this happens, buy bottled pectin and follow the directions on the bottle. Tomorrow—Furnishing the Apartment

Just Folks

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

MARY ANN
Sing of valor and sing of grace, Glories which never grow commonplace,
Whether you find them in serf or king,
Always a thrill of delight they bring,
And so I am singing of Mary Ann,
A marvel of grace with the frying pan.

Now Mary Ann isn't wondrous fair,
With a siph like form and a wealth of hair, Though I cannot guess what she once has been

It's a long, long time since she passed sixteen,
And I'm very sure that no busy man
Would waste many minutes on Mary Ann.

But the children shout of her charms all day
They cling to her skirts in the tenderest way,
And it seems to me that they never see
That she isn't as young as she used to be,
For there's never an end to the pies and cakes
And cookies and sweets which Mary makes.

She sings them songs and she tells them tales,
And lets them play with her mops and pails,
And they love her and kiss as gladly, too,
So, I'm paying this tribute as best I can
To the glorious spirit of Mary Ann.

Today's Talks

NEEDING YOU

Gracian, the Spanish writer, once said that "the wise man would rather see men needing him than thanking him."

It is this desire that creates within us all a kind of community heart. You need other people, and that what makes them need you. We wake up in the morning craving, hungering for that which is not food—something to lighten the burden that weighs upon us, no matter how well we may think we are situated.

Perhaps the stranger you passed upon the street today is to be your future friend. He probably felt what you felt as you both passed so wonderingly.

We know that if we water the flower in our home or yard that it will return its beauty and perfume to us in kind. And so we know that when we give out of our longing to some one else, that some one else who needs us, will return a measure of his possessions to us. Somebody needs you! It is this thing which whets the aspirations of all mankind. It is this which develops our personality and causes us to grow. It is an acknowledgment of our lacks and of our desire to divide our gains.

We live most of the time in the lives of others anyway. Even when we are not conscious of it. Our ways are shaped by those we love and admire.

You never know how fertile the soul of another's life may be. But it doesn't take long to find out after you have planted something of yourself there. And the greatest harvest of happiness may spring up where you least expect.

Do something each day to make people need you. There isn't an hour of the day that you do not need somebody else in some way or other.

OHIO AT WORK

OHIO SECOND MOTOR PRODUCTION

Value of Automobile Production in Year
Second Only To Michigan's Large Total.

MICHIGAN $1,552,000,000

OHIO $355,000,000

NEW YORK $400,000,000

INDIANA $167,000,000

Copyright 1925 by CENTRAL NATIONAL BANK, CLEVELAND, OHIO.

Outside of Michigan, Ohio is the first automobile producing state in the union. Ohio in a year supplies enough automobiles to fill the annual demand of several foreign countries.

According to the latest industrial survey of the U. S. Census Bureau, the value of the product of automobile factories in 1923 was slightly more than three billion dollars. Of this, Michigan factories account for a billion and a half. Ohio came next with a production value at $355,000,000 or more than twice the of New York.

The figures given here include only the value of the production of plants making automobiles and not the output of those making motor bodies and parts.

The year 1925 has been one of very unusual activity in an industrial way and it is probable that the figures for 1925 will not differ greatly from those of two years previous.

Dance Music that fills the room on the new ORTHOPHONIC Victrola

The new Orthophonic Victrola will not be drowned out by the shuffling of dancers' feet. It will give you all the volume you need.

The bass tones are rich and magnificent. The double-bass, the sousaphone, the big sax boom gloriously on each accented beat of the music. That's what carries a dance rhythm!

The model illustrated is the Credenza—inspired in design by the great Italian masters of the Renaissance.

If you never have heard the Orthophonic, there is an experience coming for you. You absolutely cannot judge it by anything that has been done in the past.

To hear the Orthophonic is to want one. You had better order yours early, for there will not be nearly enough to go 'round this Christmas. All Orthophonic hen the body is harboring an excessive number of dead cells and other waste material one cannot say that he is entirely alive. Minute cells that constitute the body tissues lose their vitality and life, and are taken up by the venous blood and carried to the various organs which take part in the work of elimination. Now these dead cells and minute corpuscles linger in the tissues if one lives an inactive life.

Therefore it is literally true that you are half dead if you do not give the muscular system its proper use!

Physically the muscular system is such an important part of the body that failure to keep it in good condition through failing to keep it active, seriously affects other parts. The great part of the food we eat is consumed by the muscles. Most of the heat produced by the body is generated in the muscles. Therefore to neglect this part of our organism means to disorganize, to a large extent, the workings of all other parts. The appetite, under such conditions, fails and the entire functional system loses tone.
In fact, I may say that exercise is the first and most important of all the methods of building functional strength.
When the muscles are exercised the vital organs are energized and the activity of the entire functional system greatly increased—all clearly indicating that in taking physical exercise the internal organs are aroused and stimulated. Unusual muscular development is of no great value in this age, but a normal degree of strength is absolutely necessary in the struggle for health and vitality.

XENIA AWARDED REGIMENTAL BAND OF 147TH INFANTRY; TO FORM SOON

Xenia will soon boast the Regimental Band of the 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard.

This fact became known Friday when Captain Leroy V. John, Company L, 147th Infantry, announced he has received authority from regimental headquarters to organize the band here at once.

For the purpose of forming the musical organization, a mass meeting of interested musicians will be held Monday evening at 8 o'clock at Company L Armory and Captain Heilman, Cincinnati, will be here next Friday to muster in the new bandmen.

The band members will be in the National Guard, attached to the Service Company, 147th Regiment, which is located at Cincinnati. The band will be equipped and uniformed by the government and all musical instruments furnished and will be one of four infantry bands in the state. It will consist of forty eight pieces.

Necessity of forming a new Regimental Band presented itself when the previous band at Cincinnati was mustered out because expansion of units there crowded the armory. When the band was dissolved, Captain John made application for permission to organize a Regimental Band here. Authority to proceed is significant due to the fact that Xenia is one of the smaller cities having units of the Regiment.

H. E. Seall, band director at the O. S. and S. O. Home and who also has directed the band organized under the name of Company L, will be leader and instructor of the new band. Every musician in the county within the age limit for army service will be eligible to join. The band members will then become members of the national Guard and will be equipped with infantry uniforms.

"Bobbed Hair"
A DAZZLING MYSTERY STORY BY TWENTY FAMOUS AUTHORS

SYNOPSIS
Connemara Moore, finding herself on a yacht in Long Island Sound after midnight, attempted to leap overboard, but was restrained by one Pooch, a stranger. Then McTish, the skipper, fell Pooch for annoying her. In the bow of the boat Connemara is amazed to find young David Lacy, with whom she had driven from Aunt Celina's Connecticut home. He had been spilled in an automobile accident and is now in the company of two mysterious characters, "Doc" and "Sweetie."

CHAPTER VIII—Continued
"Shut up, Doc, you're all wet!" called the lady weakly, sitting up on the deck. This was a true statement, however she meant it.

"Are you all right, Sweetie?" asked the big fellow anxiously.

"K. O.," responded the girl tersely. "Where's the guy we had with us?"

"I hope he's drowned!" was the unfeeling answer. "The Big stiff—he was a Jonah! Hey, who's in charge of this tub?" he added to McTish.

McTish turned to look at Lacy, who, rope in hand, was in controversy with Mr. Pooch.

"Stick out your arms like a nice little boy," suggested Lacy. "I'm going to tie you up in a neat little package and ship you somewhere where you'll be more appreciated!"

Mr. Pooch slowly arose to his feet. He surveyed the slighter man contemptuously and then his roving eyes took in the little group in the bow who were watching the tableau with various emotions. As his glance fell on Connemara, his eyes brightened. Mr. Pooch had a one-track mind.

Lacy dropped Mr. Pooch to the deck.

"Gimme that fifty grand!" he demanded hoarsely, staggering toward her. The big man and his girl companion started and looked at each other significantly.

"Do what you're told!" exclaimed Lacy impatiently—and dropped Mr. Pooch to the deck with a perfectly timed left hook. Immediately stooping, he began the process of tying up his victim.

"Where's that gun?" whispered Doc, shaking Sweetie's arm.

"I lost it when this scow hit us," Sweetie answered—then warned, "Don't start nothin' you can't finish. Doc!"

Ignoring her advice, Doc strode over to Connemara and grasped her arm roughly. "So you did get the jack, hey?" he growled. "Well, that makes things easier. Gimme that dough or I'll croak you!"

Lacy reached Connemara's side as though shot from a cannon and while Sweetie's warning shriek was still on the air, his right fist shot out and thudded against Doc's jaw. But Doc did not go down, a la Pooch. Instead, he returned the compliment with much vigor. In another instant the two men were thrashing about the rolling deck, while McTish, in response to Mr. Lacy's shouted command held the struggling, clawing, howling Sweetie, with both arms tightly pinioned at her sides. From his prostrate position on the floor, Mr. Pooch watched the proceedings with mournful interest.

A fortunate blow from Lacy, who even to Connemara's inexperienced eyes seemed to be something of a boxer, sent Doc crashing to the deck. The big man's head struck a projection with a resounding and soul-satisfying bump. He lay still and unresisting as Lacy deftly bound him and with the help of McTish rolled him alongside Mr. Pooch. Released during the process, Sweetie leaned against the rail and glared at each in turn.

If I don't tie you, will you make an attempt to act like a lady?" Lacy called the girl.

"Leave me and Doc go and we'll call it a night," answered Sweetie, apparently succumbing to Mr. Lacy's smile. "Tomorrow's another day!"

"And you may put me ashore also, while you're about it!" broke in Connemara, annoyed at the half-admiring glance Sweetie bestowed on Lacy.

Lacy let out a few more inches on his smile and surveyed both girls thoughtfully.

"I cannot leave you young ladies as abruptly as that," he said. "You have interested me strangely—ch, Sister—while you, Sweetie, made a decided impression on me back there in the dory!" And he rubbed a noticeable lump on his head gingerly.

"What are you going to do with us?" asked Connemara anxiously. The mocking light in his eyes disturbed her.

"I will decide that later!" he answered mysteriously. "Just now I want to know who you all are and what this insane nonsense is all about!"

"Well, first," smiled Connemara, "you can take this beastly money, That may prevent any further attempts on my life!"

Lacy stared at the bundle of banknotes in her outstretched hand. So did Mr. Pooch and Doc. Mr. Pooch emitted a baffled groan and rolled on his side, as if to hide the scene from his view. Doc, who was swearing with great heartiness, stopped abruptly.

"I don't want this. What is it—how much?" asked Lacy.

"It's more than I'm going to be responsible for," said Connemara firmly. "Please—please—just stick it in your pocket—or anywhere."

"Well," said Lacy, "it's very irregular, but I'm always anxious to do what a lady requests."

He took the money and stuffed it carelessly in the pocket of his wet coat. As he did so out of the darkness came a gruff hail. A shapeless hulk grated against the yacht's side.

CHAPTER IX Sophie Kerr

By Sophie Kerr

McTish and Lacy, Connemara and the Sweetie person, were galvanized into attention and rushed to the rail. Pooch and Doc could do nothing but stretch their necks anxiously in the direction of the hail, and squirm uneasily.

"Ship aho-o-o-y!" sang out Lacy. "Look out, you'll run us down, you poor goofs. What're y' doing? Where's your lights?"

There was silence for a moment, and then the voice, much less gruff, came from the darkness, accented in amazement: "By the great horn spoon, that's Dave Lacy and his old tub, the Bloody Nuisance. Dave, you scoundrel, what are you doing here?"

"Listen—say!" Lacy's voice was just as much amazed, and quite hilariously joyful. "Why, Bob Mer—"

"S-s-s-s-s!" said the other voice, sharply. "Don't call my name! I'm looking for somebody, somebody in a little foolish boat, maybe two of them, sneaking round these waters and being as inconspicuous as possible. Seen anything like that tonight?"

"I've only been aboard a few minutes. I'll ask McTish. What about it, Mac?"

"Not a sign nor a sound," declared McTish. "And I've been on the lookout too."

"Oh, damn!" went on the unseen voice. "Just my rotten luck. Say, Dave, you going to anchor here?"

"I might, if there was any inducement," said Lacy. "Why don't you come on board? I've got Scotch and rye."

A low groan of anguish burst simultaneously from Doc and Pooch at this announcement.

"I'm going to take a little quiet run round, for half an hour or so, but I'll be back and go you a couple down the hatch," said the voice. "You stick right here, old son, and wait for me. And keep a weather eye out for any little boats with two or three people in 'em. If any such come round, and you can inveigle the folks on board, lay 'em out with a marine spike!"

"Who is yon talkative laddie back?" asked McTish sourly, as the boat beside them slipped away quietly into the night.

They will practice one night a week three weeks in each month and on the first Friday of each month will go to Cincinnati where they will play at the armory of the headquarters companies. Transportation will be furnished and expenses paid. The band will also take part in the Guard parades at Cincinnati on Memorial Day, Independence Day and the Fourth of July and will spend fifteen days each summer at Camp Perry. They will draw $3 a day at Camp Perry and will be paid according to their rank for each practice night. On all occasions when the band is not needed for Regimental parades at Cincinnati it will be available for local use, it is said.

A warrant officer, a newly created office, ranking junior to second lieutenant but above the highest non-commissioned officer and rating a salute, will be the officer in charge of the band. Equipment for the band is expected to arrive here the week following the meeting next Friday when the band will be mustered into the service.

Further information on the band may be obtained from Captain John or Professor Seall.

Colds Broken in one day

Colds demand quinine in a form which does not affect the head. That means Hill's Cascara-Bromide-Quinine.

They demand a laxative. Cascara is the best we know.

They demand tonics, and Hill's contains two of them. Also other factors of vast importance in a cold.

Hill's stops a cold in 24 hours. It stops fever and headache. It breaks grippe in three days.

Then be sure you get the genuine, proved for 25 years. You cannot afford to take chances with a cold. All druggists sell Hill's.—Adv.

Dairy Products Milk Is Pasteurized and Bottled Under the Most Clean and Sanitary Conditions.

GREENE COUNTY FURNISHES DAIRY PRODUCTS MILK

All of the milk used by The Dairy Products Co. is produced in Greene County. The herds are carefully selected and the milking and cooling of the milk on the farm is done in accordance with the strict Dairy Products standards. This special care, combined with our 100 per cent pasteurization means milk that is absolutely pure and safe. Always use it in your home and safeguard the family's health.

Pasteurization A SAFEGUARD FOR Public Health

The United States Public Health Service, in its report of November 7, 1924, states as follows:

"High grade raw milk is not safe milk."

The question as to whether high-grade raw milk is 'safe milk' was carefully considered and answered in the negative. Personal experience in the operation of a certified dairy has resulted in the firm conviction that no precautions humanely possible are enough to prevent at all times the transmission of disease germs through raw milk. Employees will frequently have intestinal disturbances and engage in a milking or bottling operation before disclosing their condition. They will sneeze into their hands and even under the most rigid supervision continue milking without precautions. They can be in an infective condition for a day or two prior to the occurrence of the first symptoms in certain infectious diseases. Finally, health examinations, while valuable, cannot guarantee the discovery of all carriers. It was therefore decided to adopt the policy that while the safety of raw milk increases as the precautions surrounding it increase, no milk, how carefully safeguarded, can be sufficiently safe in its raw state."

"High grade raw milk, properly pasteurized or boiled is safe milk."

"What then can be considered to be really safe milk? Briefly, it is believed that the wisest answer to this question is 'High-grade raw milk, properly pasteurized or boiled.' By 'properly pasteurized' is meant 'pasteurized under the regular supervision of and in apparatus approved by a competent health authority.'"

For more than five years The Dairy Products Company has served Xenia with the best milk it is possible to produce. You can depend on every Dairy Products product. Everything is highest grade and perfectly pure.

NASTIES STRESSES VALUE OF SIGHT PRAYER IN CLOSING PRIDE SERMON OF MISSION

Helpfulness of prayer in the mat-pounded by the daily life was described by the evangelist at the sermon at Christ Episcopal Church, Thursday night.
"Our only hope is in prayer," Christ told us to pray in secret,
"God reminds us, as the Pharisees, to be seen of nature lest we be seen of men, and gain a reputation for piety."
"He puts us in the midst of the world, with its work multiplying duties, produced a stress and strain before known. In these cir-stances we need the strength and peace that comes from quiet com-union with God," the Rev. Mr. Long said.
"Every day regularly and as a matter of course, we should withdraw ourselves for five or ten minutes, in peace and peace by opening ourselves as receptacles to the inflowing of God. In these brief periods, we should insulate ourselves from the world, about us, physically, mentally, and mind and by shutting out all unprofitable and resentful thoughts. In this way we can obtain greater strength for our tasks and a keener sense of doing them."
Thursday night's service closed mission, which was held for three of the week at Christ Church.

When You Eat Too Much!

Anyone who gets up from a have a sharp, mean pain! Otherwise he, she, or it has NOT celebrated according to accept-taken internally makes the various dishes you've enjoyed sing in chorus instead of each singing in a separate key. In simpler words, Pep Tabs are dern fine for indigestion.

Thanksgiving Day—Age 304 Years!

Three Hundred and Four Years ago—1621—The Plymouth Fathers celebrated the FIRST Thanksgiving Day in acknowledgement of their FIRST harvest in America! Its National celebration in recognition of the year's blessing was FIRST proclaimed in New York in 1789 by George Washington and set for observation Thursday, November 26th of that year. In 1863 Abraham Lincoln by proclamation set the last Thursday in November as the day of Thanksgiving.

If those sturdy, early pioneers could today visit the country that received them so harshly, could see what their children and children's children had made of the barren wastes in only a three short centuries, amazement and wonder would sit on their minds!

Probably the only vestige left of a typical Thanksgiving ceremony of the 17th Century is our insistence of the TURKEY as the centerpiece for the Thanksgiving feast. To thousands, Thanksgiving Day is called "Turkey Day," only the more thoughtful sensing the deeper and more beautiful meaning of its title.

Our Publicists, our economists, our observers in the High Tower of matters financial join in a mighty chorus without discord, that NEVER in the proud history of this proud and mighty country have the people thereof enjoyed more prosperity than in 1925

And the sky has few, if any, clouds in it! Our future is bright!
Thursday, November 26th, is our 1925 day of Thanksgiving!

on guard to see that the In-house! The head of the house generally excused himself a couple times before dessert to adjourn to a peephole with a blunderbus to nick a redskin.

Nowadays the only Indians we're bothered with are bootleggers!
And they've got so blamed civilized you don't have to shoot them only

Yes, times change in 300 years. Wonder what wind of Indians they'll have on Thanksgiving Day in 2239 A. D.? There's a thought

CAVERNS of ENDLESS NIGHT

Sighing for New Worlds to Conquer, Explorers' Club Seeks Depths of Earth to Probe Ancient Mysteries of Plutonic Realm.

"In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
A stately pleasure-dome decree,
Where Alph, the sacred river, ran Through caverns measureless to man
Down to a sunless sea."

MAN'S first home was a cavern; his earliest shelter a cave. Like the fierce beasts with which he contended for the mastery of the earth, he crawled into a hole to take refuge from the wild storms and bitter temperatures of prehistoric time. And today, after a thousand centuries of evolution, there lingers yet in his consciousness a dim, primeval longing for the dark underground recesses and sunless labyrinths in which his savage forebears made their successful stand against the incredible hardships of existence.

So inextricably is the Present mingled with the Past that it often happens, when the modern explorer scrambles on hands and knees through the tortuous passages and corridors, that he treads all unwittingly upon the mausoleum of his ancient ancestors, buried layer upon layer in the accumulated rubbish of centuries.

But whether or not such caves yield evidences of Paleolithic occupation, they remain an unfailing source of interest, not only to the scientist, but to the average person, who finds a strange delight in venturing into the mysterious darkness of this subterranean realm.

An Age-Old Mystery

What tremendous forces rived these mighty crevices in the living rock? To what limits do they extend, and what unlighted secrets do they hold? It is an old question, which offers a perpetual challenge to the restless curiosity and intellectual hunger of man.

Not long ago the country was swayed with horror at the fatal outcome of a daring attempt to penetrate the hidden mysteries of the earth. Crawling alone through a precipitous crack in the crumbling rock near Cave City, Kentucky, a man was pinned beneath a fallen boulder in a constricted pocket sixty feet below the surface and there died after 18 days of torture, despite the best efforts of his would-be rescuers to extricate him.

One more such attempt, less tragic and more picturesque in its aspects, was made recently in the famous Endless Caverns of Virginia, a vast maze of tangled passages and vaulted grottoes which stretch for miles beneath the Shenandoah Valley, to what limits no man knows. Thirteen men and one woman went down into the Stygian blackness of the caves to search for their ultimate confines. For days they pursued their quest, penetrating the subterranean regions, where no human foot had ever trod before. And in the end, after many adventures, they were forced to turn back unsatisfied, baffled by the jealous guardianship which Nature keeps over the hidden secrets of her domain.

In Shenandoah Valley

The Endless Caverns are cut in the extensive geological formation known as the Shenandoah limestone, a portion of the great Appalachian Valley which stretches from Birmingham in the south to Albany in the north, walled in by the parallel ridges of the Allegheny and Blue Ridge Mountains.

At certain places, where these caverns approach close to the surface, the crust of the earth has given away, leaving sinkholes and orifices. Such a one, at Newmarket, Virginia, ten miles from Staunton, has been known since an early period of American history as the entrance to the famous caves which popular tradition has represented as endless.

A Serious Undertaking

It was in an effort to disprove this legend by actual investigation that the party organized by the Explorers' Club gathered there. They were equipped with all the paraphernalia which is associated with subterranean exploration: powerful focusing hand flashlights with an ample reserve supply of batteries, coils of rope, food, geologists' hammers, cameras, calcium flares for photographic work, first-aid kits, and hobnailed boots with the oldest of old soles. The latter items are always advisable when exploring underground, for much of the going is through mud and over slimy, wet surfaces.

Thus attired, the individual members of the party gave little evidence of their distinguished positions in the ordinary walks of life. One might have been pardoned, for instance, for failing to recognize the tall person in the battered cap, venerable sweater, and muddy riding breeches as Dr. Chester A. Reeds, Associate Curator of Invertebrate Paleontology at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

Neither was there any visible clue which might have led to the identification of the rather shabby gentleman in the old hunting jacket as George K. Cherrie, the eminent ornithologist. Nevertheless it was this same man who made no less than 37 trips to South America in the interests of the Museum of Natural History, and as a co-sharer in the dangers of the famous Cherrie-Roosevelt expedition to the River of Doubt, was alone responsible for bringing the former President back alive after the latter had contracted the tropical disease which finally caused his death.

Well-Known Explorers

Here also, effectually disguised in the least chic of sports costumes, consisting of an ancient and very much worn golf suit, was Carveth Wells, fellow of the Royal Roped together like mountain climbers the subterranean explorers plunged into the uncharted portions of the Endless Caverns in an attempt to find their furthest confines. On more than one occasion this precaution saved members of the party from dangerous falls. Geographical Society, and well-known for his daring explorations in jungles and arctic wastes. With him was a gentleman done out in a nondescript and obviously discarded lounge suit, already smeared with mud. He was Henry Collins Walsh, president of the Explorers' Club and leader of the present expedition.

At his elbow, ready to furnish stimulants to the fainting adventurers from his trusty canteen, stood Dr. Robert N. Keeley, surgeon who accompanied Peary on one of his dashes to the Pole. The others were garbed with a similar degree of informality.

The initial part of their journey was through a well-known and frequently travelled section of the caverns. Owing to the enterprise of the owners, who have placed the property on a money-making basis by charging admission to the public, the previously explored areas are equipped with electric light and such aids to navigation as are required for the safety and comfort of the patrons.

Under the glare of this brilliant illumination the scene was one of great splendor and beauty. The path wound along through lofty caves where glittering stalactites hung in countless hundreds from the roof, like giant icicles of colored crystal. Beneath were corresponding stalagmites, rearing up from the floor to meet them as the slow drip of water from above brought infinitesimal quantities of dissolved lime to add to their stature. Everywhere the rock was carved and graven into sinuous figures and fantastic images by the underground rivers which once had flowed this way. And after a mile and a half they arrived at the limit of the known portions of the cave.

Here the real business of the expedition was to begin, and preparations were made to venture into the unknown. All was dark beyond, the arching galleries and empty vaults fading into a black nothingness. Flashlights were made ready, for these would be the chief light supply for the balance of the exploration; a long rope was passed from member to member of the party, fastening them together, and the march began.

Council of War

Almost at once they met with an apparently insuperable difficulty. Before them yawned a chasm, completely blocking the path. Investigation disclosed no possible detour; it was evident that the gulf must be bridged or the exploration must be abandoned at the start.

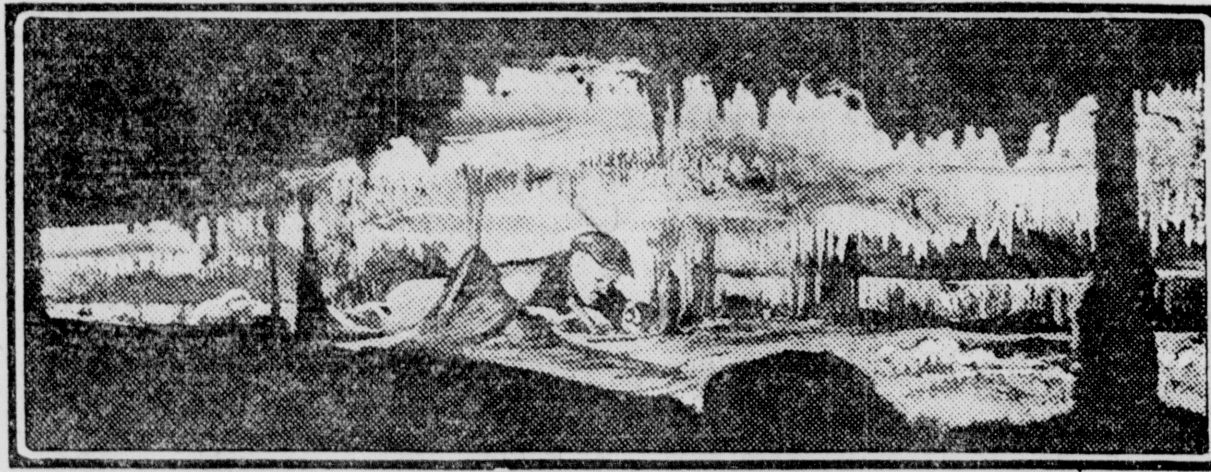

A council of war was called and various suggestions made to meet the situation. The advisability of sending back for bridge-building materials was discussed and rejected. Someone then brought forward the idea of spanning the crevice with a rope. This plan appeared to have possibilities, and the flashlights were trained upon the opposite edge of the crevice with a view to finding a suitable anchorage. Fortunately one was afforded—a stout old stalagmite which lifted its stubby finger on the very brink of the abyss.

A running noose was prepared on the end of a strong rope and the problem then became that of throwing it so that it would fall over the rock pinnacle and hold fast. Several fruitless attempts netted nothing, and it began to be felt that a serious oversight had been made in omitting Will Rogers from the list of invited guests.

At last, however, a lucky cast of the rope, and overhanging a sixty-foot chasm. To proceed, it was necessary to traverse this treacherous shaft, where the water trickled down over a coating of ooze, to fall over the edge into empty blackness. Here again, advent the improvised lasso securely around the column, and in no time at all a volunteer had swung himself across the black void, where the rush of water sounded with a distant murmur below. Another rope was passed, and both drawn tight, one serving as foot-bridge and the other as a handline. Then one by one the party crossed over.

More Trouble

They went on, only to encounter further hindrances to progress. At one point, where the way funneled down to a small hole in a rock wall, one of the bulkier explorers got himself firmly wedged in his efforts to get through. Carveth Wells, member of the Royal Geographical Society of England, distinguished for his explorations in the Malay jungle and in Lapland, was pinched firmly by his midriff for the better part of a quarter of an hour while his mirth-ridden comrades made desultory efforts to get him out.

Beyond, the only path lay across a narrow ledge of rock, sloping like vancing with infinite care, a volunteer acted as pioneer, stretching a rope along the upper edge of the ledge. Grasping this, the others worked their way along sideways on hands and knees, meditating upon the cheering reflection that if they slipped their bodies could never be recovered.

But all was not hardship upon this journey. The moving rays of the flashlight fell upon innumerable scenes of a gorgeousness almost beyond description, blazing like jewels in the first light that ever had fallen upon them. Many queer formations were found, such as the great rock shaped like a mitten, which gave out a clear musical note when struck; the weirdly realistic Angel Wings; the countless Lily Pad, Coral, and Snowdrift formations, and others too numerous to mention.

An 80-Foot Root

At one place the roots of a tree, far above on the surface of the earth, had penetrated 80 feet down through a crack in the rock into the cavern, where it ran down through the hollow center of a stalactite and emerged at its end. In another spot two cracks in a high wall intersected to form a perfect cross, rimmed with glittering lime-stone encrustations.

No signs of human life were discovered, although Dr. Reeds found the remains of a bear which had fallen into the caves and perished of starvation. His jaw-bone was retrieved from the mud, and the marks of his claws were visible in widely separated portions of the cavern. How he had managed to make his way in the utter darkness through the perilous labyrinths of the cave will forever remain a mystery. The teeth of the poor brute showed the effect of his gnawings upon the surrounding rocks as the pangs of hunger assailed him. An estimate of the age of the deposit in which his jaw-bone was discovered places the date of his misfortune at approximately three hundred years ago.

At another point, the furthest reached by the explorers, numbers of small bats were found flying in the inky darkness. One of these was captured by Mr. Cherrie, who prized it highly, placing it in his pocket and bringing it home with him for future examination.

Relics of Ancient Life

In addition to these, the only signs of animal life were the fossil remains of worms, believed to be remnants of the marine life of the primeval ocean whose waves once swept these shores. It is regarded as extremely doubtful whether these particular caverns ever were used by early man as a shelter, as no slightest trace of his occupancy has been found.

Curiously enough, the temperature of the cave remains unchanged in all seasons of the year, maintaining a mean level of about 56 degrees, no matter whether there is mid-winter or full summer in the outer world. In this comfortable atmosphere, neither too cold nor too warm for moderate bodily exertion, the explorers experienced a singular absence of fatigue. They could walk for hours, scrambling over all manner of difficult terrain, without tiring in the least. Similarly, the effect of the pure, cool air of the cave was to dispel hunger. Such, at least, is the belief of the members of the party.

So little demand did hunger make upon the explorers, be the reasons what they may, that the only food consumed in a full day's tramping in the caverns was the handful of biscuit carried by each individual in his pocket. Water was to be had everywhere, but the favorite drinking place was a natural fountain, where the clear liquid welled up pure and cold from a basin transparent as alabaster and beaded with the most delicate arabesques.

Under Massanutten

For the better part of two miles the party picked its way through the winding tunnels which ran on and on in the hollow of the great limestone fold. Their wanderings brought them beneath Massanutten Mountain, which projects abruptly from the Shenandoah Valley, immediately over the lowest portion of the limestone stratum.

For days they carried on their quest, working further and further in the darkness beneath the broad fields and leafless woodlands lying bright under the pale winter sun. The tortuous passages bored ever onward through the rock, ascending and descending, turning and twisting, branching and dividing into innumerable communicating crevices, with occasional broadenings into glittering galleries and magic caverns where every turn of the flashlight revealed new wonders and fresh beauties to draw murmurs of appreciation from the beholders.

At last, filing through a narrow orifice after a long hour of difficult going, they emerged into a lofty, vaulted chamber which was more lovely than any yet discovered. By common consent they sat down to rest.

A Subterranean Palace

From their dry ledge they could just see the further end of the chamber, some two hundred feet distant, where the rays of their electric torches were focused in long pencils of light upon a bewildering display of natural sculptures and colorations. Ninety feet above, the roof glimmered like that of a cathedral, studded with graceful pendants and inverted pinnacles of translucent stone, which hung in countless thousands from the soaring ridges and groined recesses of the dome.

On the uneven floor of the cavern stood other thousands of pointed stalagmites, like the columns of a gnome's palace, built up through the centuries by the lime-laden water falling drop by drop from above. Some, more ancient, had crept toward the roof until, in the less lofty portions, they had touched and fused with the stalactites jutting down to meet them. In the setting of the surrounding darkness these slender pillars of cloudy crystal refracted the brilliant beams of the flashlights with an indescribably beautiful effect.

In the considerable time which elapsed while they sat there examining the details of the marvelously intricate fretwork all about them, it was decided to call this grotto Walsh cavern, in honor of Henry Collins Walsh, leader of the expedition.

The Endless Tunnel

As they approached the rock walls at the far end, vivid-hued and deeply pocked by the corroding waters, they discerned the opening of the further tunnel, leading off again into the bowels of the earth. It was large and round, and carved out in rippling lines of flow by the prehistoric river.

Every indication pointed to its continuation for miles, and the sight of it gave the explorers pause. These caverns had extended thus far without any sign of diminution; there was every probability that they would stretch on unchanged for a like or greater distance. It was judged, from the evidence of the strata and the general nature of the formations, that they might exist in their present state throughout the entire length of the limestone deposit. For all practical purposes, therefore, they might be considered endless.

Here, then, the hardy adventurers turned back. To all it was a source of keen disappointment that they could not pursue to its end this continual succession of gorgeous sights and thrilling experiences. But time and facilities were lacking for a more extended exploration at that moment. Later, they hope, it will be possible to make another attempt to plumb the uncharted depths of earth, and trace the Endless Caverns to their end.

CHRISTMAS SEALS TO BE MAILED OUT

"The 'mail sale' method of selling anti-Tuberculosis Seals is a business way of handling them and it is a big business," Mrs. Emma McCalmont, city chairman of the seal sale said Thursday in discussing her plans. Following the method adopted last year, Xenia citizens will receive stamps through the mail, and are to send money in return to Mrs. McCalmont.

In the seventeen years of the Christmas Seal Sales, different methods have been tried out. To affirm that a method is good, just because it is old or bad because it is new is hardly logical," she said, declaring that the mailing plan was the best yet devised.

Seal sales in the United States last year amounted to $4,517,000.
